A Batch of Proverbs.

SCENE.—Parlor.

Enter MR. and MRS. JONES, C. E. at rise of curtain.

Mrs. J. Don't tell me, Mr Jones; I'll not endure it from morning till night. You are forever torturing me with those senseless quotations, and every question I ask you, you answer with a motto or a proverb. We are all at variance and seperated.

Mr. J. That should not be. "A house divided cannot stand," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. I will not hear another word.

Mr. J. "None so deaf as those who won't hear."

Mrs. J. You are most provoking. You know I have a party to dinner and my cousin and aunt are coming to help me.

Mr. J. "Relations are best apart," and "Too many cooks spoil the broth," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. As the proverb says! You'd aggravate a saint! You monster you—you—you! (enraged)

Mr. J. Go on my dear, scold away. Hard words, or to quote an old saying, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me."

Mrs. J. Indeed, some of your convivial friends if they don't hurt you in name will very likely break you in pocket. I can scarcely get a penny for myself.

Mr. J. My love "Take care of the pennies, and the pounds will take care of themselves," another proverb, "A penny saved is a penny earned" and another "Willful waste causes woeful want."

Mrs. J. I'll neither waste words nor do I want any more of your twaddle about these stupid old proverbs.

Mr. J. Call the sayings of the wisest men stupid, but then you know no better, "You can't make a silken purse of a sow's ear," and "Where ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

Mrs. J. If this is the result of wisdom, I think it wise to be ignorant. I wouldn't learn if I could, and I won't try—at least not now.

Mr. J. As the proverb says, "There is no time like the present," and "None so stupid as those who won't learn."

Mrs. J. I think your proverbs all moonshine, so you must wait till I am in a humor.

Mr. J. "While the grass is growing the steed is starving."

Mrs. J. Well, let him starve if he don't die until I become a hay-maker, he'll live to see the sun stand still.

Mr. J. Indeed, "You should make hay while the sun shines"—'tis an old motto to "Take time by the fore-lock," and "Don't ride a willing horse to death."

Mrs. J. (angry) I'll have you understand that I'll lose no time in packing up and getting out of this house before you cause my death.

Mr. J. You thought of the old proverb, "Opportunity lost can never be regained," and "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," and a third, "Strike while the iron is hot."

Mrs. J. I wish I was free, the iron should cool enough before I'd strike—but I'll have a divorce!

Mr. J. That will be "Jumping out of the frying pan into the fire," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. Hang the proverbs and those that quote them.

Mr. J. "Those that are born to hang will never be drowned."

Mrs. J. Will you hold your stupid tongue!

(stamps her foot)

Mr. J. "A still tongue makes a wise head."

Mrs. J. Oh, this is intolerable! If you don't cease, I'll jump out of the window.

Mr. J. 'Look before you leap,' as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. Mr. Jones, I am a mild tempered woman, but if you keep this up, we shall quarrel and have words.

Mr. J. "A thousand words won't fill a bushel."

Mrs. J. The case is a hopeless one. Jones, I go hence, far from what I thought would be my home—I'll go thousands of miles away.

Mr. J. Remember the old proverb, "A rolling stone gathers no moss."

Mrs. J. And this is the man I thought all perfection. I thought so by his appearance.

Mr. J. Never judge people by appearance. "Tis not all gold that glitters."

Mrs. J. You used to praise my beauty.

Mr. J. "Beauty is but skin deep."

Mrs. J. True, but "Ugliness goes to the bone;" you were there when that was served out.

Mr. J. "Every eye creates it's own beauty."

Mrs. J. It will take a powerful magnifying glass to discover yours. I can't see it.

Mr. J. "None so blind as those who won't see," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. Will you never cease those old saws? It is a perfect mania.

Mr. J. "What's bred in the bone will come out in the flesh," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. Flesh and blood can't stand this. I'll go and attend to the house duties and darn your socks.

Mr. J. Right, "A stitch in time saves nine."

Mrs. J. I wish you had a stitch in your side and kept it till you left off the use of those senseless sayings. I suppose you will some day?

Mr. J. "Better late than never," and "Never too late to mend."

Mrs. J. I'm determined! I'll go to my parents—certain sure.

Mr. J. "There's many a slip betwixt cup and lip."

Mrs. J. I'll go to-morrow.

Mr. J. "Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day." "Procrastination is the thief of time."

Mrs. J. As we can't be happy together, we had better be apart.

Mr. J. Separate! Remember the proverb, "Unity is strength" and "Don't throw away dirty water till you get clean," "United we stand, divided we fall."

Mrs. J. Good-bye, I'm going away.

(starts toward c. E.)

Mr. J. "When the cat's away the mice will play."

Mrs. J. (comes back, angry) Oh! I'm a cat, am I? Mind you don't feel my claws, you—you—Oh! I could choke with rage, a fellow that I married out of charity.

Mr. J. "Charity begins at home" and "Truth will out."

Mrs. J. I speak the truth honest.

Mr. J. "Honesty is the best policy" and "Truth lies at the bottom of a well," as the proverb says.

Mrs. J. Truth does not lie anywhere. Well—

Mr. J. "Let well alone."

Mrs. J. I'm trying to make well better.

Mr. J. Mind you don't make bad worse. "Tis a long lane that has no turning" and as I think I have teased you long enough, I will confess I have only been doing this to see "What metal you were made of."

Mrs. J. (pleasantly) Why "Belle metal" of course. You should have found that out when you rung me.

Mr. J. True genuine bell metal—and toneful, except when I touched the chord of discord, by discoursing my musty proverbs, but "Enough is as good as a feast" and "Too much suga palls on the taste."

Mrs. J. (sopping his mouth with hand) Taste—don't give us another taste of proverbs.

Mr. J. You are quite right to check me.

"So we'll leave off quoting proverbs;
I'll tease you love no more;
We'll try our best to please you all,
As oft we've done before,
And make each other happy;
At least we hard will try,
And to each do
As we'd wish to be done by;
And try the fleeting hours
To make happy, merry, gay,
'For if we only have the will,
We're sure to find the way'."

Song may be introduced to close with and tag omitted, or tag and song both used, as desired.

CURTAIN.
